Post Office/Sunrise Deal Tops Actions at City Council Meeting

by Betsy Likowski

In a surprise action, the Greenbelt City Council connected assistance in getting a new post office site with the acquisition of parkland in Greenbelt East. At its Monday, February 12 regular council meeting, council agreed to sign an agreement with Peterson Companies about two parcels of land it owns. The city will acquire the ten acre Sunrise property and will move to condemn the parcel of land at the corner of Hanover Parkway and Ora Glen Drive so a post office could be built on that parcel.

Council also discussed the lease agreement for artist studios in the Community Center and various housekeeping items.

Post Office

Council moved quickly with almost no discussion on the issue of a post office in Greenbelt East. About the only discussion on the issue was an explanation by the city attorney Robert Manzi. Council then approved a memorandum of understanding with property owners the Peterson Companies and authorized condemnation procedures to begin.

Council has long sought a postal facility in Greenbelt East. The Peterson Companies are willing to have a post office built on the property and has a contract with the postal service.

A former owner of the property unilaterally placed a covenant on the parcel limiting development to an office building.

Earlier the city, postal service, and the current owner tried to remove the restriction in court.

The city will now start condemnation proceedings to acquire the parcel. This will involve a jury trial. As of February 20, the city had yet to begin action on the matter.

Also as part of the agreement, the city will be reimbursed $100,000 for a traffic light that was installed at the intersection of Hanover Parkway and Ora Glen Drive and up to $10,000 in legal costs.

Sunrise

In the other part of the deal council agreed to purchase the Sunrise property. The agreement calls for the city to purchase the Sunrise property after the condemnation issue on the other parcel of land is completed. The purchase price agreed to is $624,000. This price tag is lower than a recent appraisal done for the city. Sunrise is located between the Capital Beltway, the Holiday Inn, Greenway Village, and the dog park. This ten acre parcel of land will become city parkland.

There is a history of development proposals for Sunrise. The city had raised objections to each of them because of the impact on the surrounding neighborhoods, such as increased traffic.

In the late 1980's a six building complex containing 470 apartment units was proposed. Then a two-tower, 11-story high rise complex with 657 apartment units was proposed. The zoning of the land was changed in 1990, calling for less dense development on the site. In 1995 two four-story apartment buildings were proposed consisting of 118 units for seniors and 116 two-bedroom units.

Studio Rental

The Department of Recreation has slightly changed the guidelines for the Artist in Residence Program, which is the rental of rooms as artist studios in the Community Center. Since the department had planned to announce in late February a call for those interested in studio space in fiscal year 2002, it was requested that at this meeting the city council approve the revised guidelines. Councilmember Thomas White asked that interested groups, such as the Arts Advisory Board, be given more time to review the changes, so council action was postponed until a later meeting.

Changes include using the studio space at least 30 hours a month, undertaking one creative community service project a year in conjunction with special events sponsored by the Department of Recreation such as the Labor Day Festival, and expanding eligibility to all residents of Maryland.

The police substation will continue to be in the Windsor Green Community Center. The

Anacostia Trails Heritage Area Seeks to Increase Tourism

by Maria Piazzola

A representative from Anacostia Trails Heritage Area, Inc. updated the Greenbelt City Council on plans for improving the heritage attractions in Greenbelt and the surrounding areas at the February 12 regular meeting. Patricia Parker, executive director of the Heritage Area, described a detailed plan for the "target investment zones" that the organization will focus on developing.

Parker named eight possible target investment zones, including Greenbelt, College Park and Laurel, the organization plans to enhance as heritage tourist attractions. Improvements would include visitor kiosks, visitor centers and storefront displays. Parker also said that "main street development" in these cities is a priority. If Greenbelt is chosen, "developing a mall market" would be one of the main goals for the city.

The Anacostia Trails Heritage Area consists of the large area bordering Washington, D.C. near Bladensburg and continuing northeast in Prince George's County to the Patuxent River in Laurel. A heritage area describes a region united by a common history.

Anacostia Trails was selected by the Maryland Heritage Areas Authority because of its shared history of colonial settlement, agriculture, transportation innovations and small towns. The Maryland Heritage Areas Authority was created in 1996 to aid heritage tourism by finding grants, loans and tax credits for local economic development and capital improvement projects.

Recycling Resolution

A resolution was introduced for first reading that would increase the fee from $18 to $20 per year for residents who receive refuse collection from another provider but receive city recycling pick-up.

Audit Services

Council has decided to conduct a competitive bid for financial auditing services for the fiscal year 2001 audit. For eight years the city has retained the services of McGladrey Pullen, formerly Keller Bruner, and for the last five years has not held a competitive bid.

State Legislation

Six General Assembly bills and one proposed bill were presented for council's consideration. Council agreed to support Senate Bills 77, 149, 39 and 420, which would, respectively, allow counties and municipalities to act as aggregators for the purchase of electricity; give condominium or homeowners associations a lien priority in a foreclosure situation that would ensure they could recover unpaid fees or dues when a property is foreclosed; make it illegal to threaten appointed officials like code and law enforcement personnel; and create a grant program for municipalities, counties and other non-profit groups that conduct pedestrian safety programs.

Council also agreed to support House Bill 406 requiring that private group homes provide written notice to law enforcement agencies and schools as part of the application process; House Bill 691, which would allow municipalities to establish "Arts and Entertainment" districts and provide certain tax benefits to these areas; and a proposed "speed camera" bill that would allow for the use of cameras to take pictures of vehicles committing speeding violations so that citations could be mailed to the vehicles' owners.

Councilmembers to Recall Their Role in History

by Kevin Hammett

This Saturday, February 24, at 2 p.m., in the Community Center, Greenbelt will be hosting the first Chautauqua of 2001. This Council Members Chautauqua will feature speakers from councils past and present. The guest speakers will include Robert T. Bonham, served 1949-1951; Steve L. Comings, served 1949-1953; Robert Hurst, served 1953-1957; Alan Kistler, served 1955-1961 (mayor 1959-1961); Bruce L. Bowman, served 1959-1961; Richard Castaldi, served 1973-1983 (mayor 1981-1983); Robert C. Zugby, served 1981-1983; Antoinette Bram, served 1983-1997 (mayor 1993-1997); Rodney Roberts, served 1991-; and Alan Turnbull, served 1997 —

Greenbelt was the first city in the state of Maryland to have a council/manager form of government. Over the past six decades, the city has experienced much change. This Chautauqua will focus on the issues that shaped our city over the decades as recalled by the council members. The discussion will be moderated by former city manager James K. Giese, served 1962 - 1991. A reception will follow.

Greenbelt was designated a White House Millennium Community in 2000. At the start of this new millennium, the city is encouraging its citizens to become reacquainted with their city. During 2001, the city will be sponsoring 10 "passport events" throughout Greenbelt. The Council Members Chautauqua is the second passport event of 2001. There are also four "passport sites" in Greenbelt that can be visited at any time during the year. Millennium Passports were distributed at Greenbelt New Year 2001, and are currently available at the Greenbelt Community Center. For more information call 301-397-2208.

Beauchamp Authors Entry In Roosevelt Encyclopedia

by Dorothy Sucher

"You gain strength, courage, and confidence by every experience in which you really stop to look fear in the face... You must do the thing you think you cannot do."

These words by Eleanor Roosevelt may lack the pithiness of her husband's, "The only thing we have to fear is fear itself," but they do convey the weight of her own hard-won experience. The wife of Franklin Delano Roosevelt lost her parents at an early age, was painfully gawky, plain, and shy and endured an unfaithful spouse and a tyrannical mother-in-law who lived next door. She bore a large brood of children, though she hadn't much talent for motherhood.

Roosevelt also became one of the most famous women in the world, not just because she was America's First Lady longer than anyone else (FDR was elected President four times), but because of her own achievements as diplomat, journalist, political activist, educator, and crusader for human rights. In her day she was as much of a lightning rod for passionate opinions, pro and con, as Hillary Rodham Clinton is today. To Republicans she was anathema, as was her husband, but, when I was a child, many working people who had suffered during the Depression, my mother among them, absolutely worshipped her.

New Encyclopedia

Eleanor Roosevelt took a personal interest in the three Greenbelt Towns created during her husband's administration, especially Greenbelt, Maryland. Her relationship with Greenbelt is detailed in an entry in the newly published one-volume "Eleanor Roosevelt Encyclopedia," edited by Maurine H. Beasley of the University of Maryland, Holly C. Shulman, and Henry R. Beasley, and published by Greenwood Press. Entries ranging from "Addams, Jane" to "Zionism" cover every facet of the life of the First Lady, including her controversial, affectionate relationship with Lorena Hickock. These were contributed by scholars in the field, and the book should prove indispensable to Eleanor Roosevelt buffs as well as anyone interested in the history of the New Deal period.

The "Greenbelt Towns" entry was written by Virginia Beauchamp, author and professor emerita at the University of Maryland, who is a longtime staff member of the Greenbelt News Review. During a conversation some years ago with the encyclopedia's senior author, Beauchamp remarked that Beasley ought to include an entry on the planned towns. Beasley replied, "Fine. Why don't you write it?" So she did.

Visits to Greenbelt

According to Beauchamp's encyclopedia article, Eleanor Roosevelt visited Greenbelt a number of times, often dropping in at the Center School (now the

Point of View

Our Reporter Gets Hooked
On the New Deal Café

by Dorothy Sucher

A funny thing happened on the way to the New Deal Café. I got hooked on the place.

First I started hanging around because I had an assignment. "We hear the café may close at the end of the month, go write a story." So I wrote a story, in fact several.

At the end of the month, the café hadn't closed. After a while I noticed I was still hanging around. I liked the place.

Writers do like cafés. Writing is solitary work, and we get lonesome. Also, we're watchers. Our kindergarten teachers sent us home with report cards that said something like: "Johnny is a watcher."

We writers absorb life through our eyes, greedily, and television just won't do. We want life with a capital "L." Call us voyeurs, I don't care. We need material, even if we don't use it. We need to think about it, grind it up.

We're listeners, too. How do you think Hemingway learned to write dialogue? Cafés were his graduate school.

There's a down-home diner I go to in Vermont sometimes, with third-world prices and a mix of local folks. Sometimes I see David Mamet, the playwright, there. I say hello and then go to my own table. He looks as if he isn't doing anything except waiting for his hamburger, but I know better.

Cafés are sacred spaces where, for the price of a cup of coffee, we can be with other people and yet alone. Conversation is possible, but we don't have to talk if we don't want to. Cafés invite us to satisfy our basic needs for food, drink, rest, and a little sociability.

Rescue Fantasies

The appeal of the New Deal Café for me was somewhat special, though. True, the coffee is good and the French breads are crusty, chewy, toothsome — oh, don't get me started — after all, I'm what someone recently called "weight-impaired." The insidious part was that the café roused my rescue fantasies. Could I do something to help keep it from closing?

I hadn't been planning to get involved. Not at all. My volunteering days were done. I was old enough to take an honorable retirement. But I'd forgotten that volunteering can be a lot of fun. Before I knew it, I was doing a little this and that with this one and that one.

I wasn't the only volunteer. The café seemed to be bursting with new energy. People kept dropping by and asking how they could help. A fund drive kicked off, to pay down the debt. A benefit concert series was about to begin. People started sending checks, and running around copying flyers, and making phone calls. Not to mention taking orders, serving food, and washing dishes.

It was Greenbelt in action — a classic case!

I have a hunch the New Deal won't close, if this keeps up.

Who knows? Maybe you could get hooked.

THANKS

Over the weekend, our family pet slipped out of the house and became lost. Beau is a large dog, getting on in years and suffering from cancer. We were quite worried that he would be hit by a car. After an hour of searching, we called the Greenbelt police to alert them and to ask that if they spotted him, to give us a call. The officers shared this information to colleagues out on patrol. Shortly after we spoke with the dispatcher, an officer saw Beau, called to him, and telephoned us with his location.

Thank you so very much to the Greenbelt Police Department and the kind officers who watched for Beau. We know how busy our police department is, so it is incredibly reassuring that they were able to keep an eye out for a family pet while conducting their patrols. We always knew Greenbelt was Great. Now we know that Greenbelt Police are Great, too!

Skeptical

How caring! Our local Giant Food store is starting a Diabetes Club for BonusCard members (GNR 2/15).

Giant collects personal information when the BonusCard is applied for, then monitors purchases after that. Think about it for a moment — think about various combinations of purchases you have made and how investigative agencies could draw conclusions about your private life. I have learned of no reason to believe that Giant Food would be more trustworthy than any other handler of our personal information.

Also I have seen another marketing practice that has eroded my trust in Giant Food. They display tobacco products that are at pants pocket level to 6-year-olds. I have seen children steal these products, and have complained to the store about this, but they made no change. Neighboring counties (Howard, Montgomery) have legislation in process to ban such display of tobacco products.

My challenge to Giant is to gain my trust by creating proper display of tobacco products before they are forced by county/state law to do so. That would suggest trustworthiness to me and might make the BonusCard concept seem slightly safer.

Greenbelt Community Center). One teacher reminisced, "It was a shock when the door would open and she would appear with her Secret Service escorts."

A plaque on Crescent Road not far from the fire department commemorates one of her visits. Beauchamp writes that in the 1970s, when a new Greenbelt high school was slated to be named for FDR, "citizens petitioned to have it named instead for her." Today Eleanor Roosevelt High School, which emphasizes science and technology, is the largest high school in Maryland.

Clarification

The valuations used for housing comparisons in last week's article by James Giese were assessed valuations for fiscal year 2001. These valuations were still on the old basis of assessments where the values were only about 40% of true value. Newer assessment figures are to be at 100% of true value and Greenbelt property has been reassessed as well. Apartments are valued as commercial property and the valuation is determined based upon income production of the property, not sales value. Also, the valuations provided for Farm Gate actually included all the new free-standing homes on Research and Ridge Roads.

To celebrate the success of the ACE Reading Club and the efforts of the club's young readers, the Greenbelt Advisory Committee on Education (ACE) will hold a reception on Tuesday, February 27, from 7 to 8:30 p.m. The reception will be held in the second floor Multipurpose Room of the Greenbelt Community Center at 15 Crescent Road.

The ACE Reading Club is one of a number of programs ACE has undertaken, including award programs to recognize outstanding students and educators, a buy-a-book program to help the community support local school libraries and meetings with PTA and school representatives.

The Greenbelt City Council established the Greenbelt Advisory Committee on Education (ACE) in 1994 as a community-based advisory committee. Composed of up to nine Greenbelt residents, ACE works to ensure that the schools attended by Greenbelt children are of the highest quality. For information, call Wendy Wexler at 301-345-6660 or Leta Mach at 301-345-8105.

Meet Barbara Dolney At Artist's Reception

Like many people perhaps, artist Barbara Dolney finds that the light, mood, color and atmosphere of a place speak to her soul. Dolney has the ability to convey these aspects of place and their effect on the viewer through pastel. The artist's work is currently featured in a new exhibit at the Greenbelt Municipal Building, entitled Sense of Place, State of Being: Landscapes by Barbara Dolney. On Monday, February 26 from 6:30 to 8 p.m., the public is invited to attend a reception with the artist in the Municipal Building at 25 Crescent Road.

Perhaps because Dolney's family owned a greenhouse business or perhaps because she spent her summers in the Ozark hill country, Dolney developed an eye which focused on the beauty of rustic places. Looking at her artwork is like taking a walk through the varied and beautiful vistas the artist has seen locally and in her travels. Dolney's rich pastel drawings and paintings capture the changing colors and light that describe the seasons, as they guide the viewer on a tour of beach fronts and gardens, and elegant country settings.

Dolney's work will remain on display until March 23. Exhibit hours are from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday, whenever the room is not otherwise in use. Visitors are encouraged to call ahead to ensure access: 301-474-8000. This event is sponsored by the Greenbelt Department of Recreation. For more information call Ellen Baer at 301-397-2208.

Fun Events for Kids In Quickie Program

Local artists can help the New Deal Café fund-raising project by submitting a design for a T-shirt. The theme is "Slay the Dragon. Save java for all!" The Dragon represents the start-up debt that is to be retired this spring. Designs must promote the café in a style that will readily transfer to a quality all cotton T-shirt. Deadline for submissions is Saturday, March 10. Contact café director Earl Kepler at 301-345-2670 or ekepler@aol.com for more information.

Explorations Topic Courts and Politics

The judicial branch of government was originally constructed to insulate judges from ordinary politics, so that they could consider conflicts and reach decisions on the basis of legal principle. At times it may be difficult to distinguish clearly between politics and law, as the political events and court-centered activities in the aftermath of the last presidential election demonstrate.

Come hear Dr. Wayne Macintosh from the University of Maryland as he discusses this issue at "Explorations Unlimited" on Friday, March 2 in the Greenbelt Community Center senior classroom. "Explorations Unlimited" is a speaker series held every Friday from 1 to 3 p.m. at the Greenbelt Community Center. Everyone is welcome to attend and questions are always encouraged. ## Arts Center Opens With "Ghosts" Friday

by Heather Martin

An air of despair has settled over the Greenbelt Arts Center, an air of pensive tragedy and "Ghosts." Opening February 23 and running to March 10, the Greenbelt Arts Center will be producing Henrik Ibsen's classic play "Ghosts" on Friday and Saturday evenings at 8 p.m. There will be a Sunday matinee March 4 at 2 p.m.

Directed by Steven Cox and produced by Laurie Hardman, the play deals with depravity in its most brutal form disguised with a veneer of civility. It is a play of manipulation and endless plotting. But who is trapping whom? And how? What are the real traps in this civilized environment?

The cast is small and features Sheila Crossley-Cox as the widowed Mrs. Alving; Bill Hardy as her son, Oswald; Dan Juran as Pastor Manders; Patricia Penn as the house maid, Regina; and Bob Kleinberg as Jacob Engstrand, Regina's father.

The play deals with mature subject matter and is not appropriate for small children.

A Greenbelt Gardener

by Rosie Rhubarb

The very first signs of upcoming spring can now be seen. Near the post office a row of shrubs are in bloom. They are a witch hazel variety called "Arnold's Promise." The flowering cherry trees between the Co-op supermarket and the dry cleaners are blooming. This variety, "autumnalis," blooms in the fall and the spring. It does not have much need for the chilling effect of winter that many flowering plants require.

These plants show that in planning the garden, a few early blooming plants placed in the yard can really add life to the dull late winter days.

Also early crocuses (species) and snowdrops are beginning to bloom.

Boys and Girls Club News in Greenbelt

by Coach Doug Mangum

This week in intramurals basketball we celebrate the achievements of our student athletes in the classroom as well as the gymnasium.

Terps making straight As were Sean Flanagan, and Vin and Vig Sachidananda. Other Terps making their school's honor rolls are Alexandra Cole, Marcus Coker and Jacob Beckelman. For the Fireballs, Stanley Murphy made good citizen. For the Eagles, William Foerter and Jacob Silver achieved straight As, James Paramore made the B honor roll, and Jace Rathell, citizenship. For the Lakers, Coach Keith's daughter Oniesha Shinault reached the straight A level — "you go, girl!" As for the Manticores, they are represented on the straight A list by Sequoia Austin, and the honor roll by Evan Olsen.

Balancing their school work alongside their athletic endeavors is a tremendous skill which will pay off as these student athletes prepare themselves for future academic/athletic accomplishments. This is not easy and is not done solely by themselves! Therefore we must also recognize the accomplishments of their parents, teachers, coaches and everyone else who encourages these young people to push themselves to achieve the highest level of success.

Sports can be an excellent tool for goal setting. I believe sports and academics go hand in hand in developing youngsters' minds and bodies, as well as team work, discipline and a sense of worth and value. The moment a player scores a first basket, he or she immediately elevates to a new level. As the old truism holds, success breeds success. So I issue a challenge to those players who came up a little short to try to make your school's honor roll this quarter ... and for those who made citizenship, B honor roll or straight A honor roll to continue to do it.

Remember, success is built on consistency.

Games

The intramural basketball season completes its last games on Wednesday, February 28, with the Lakers contesting the Eagles at 6 p.m. and the Fireballs challenging the Manticores at 7:15 p.m.

The league's play-off tournament will begin on Friday, March 2 at 6:45 p.m. Squaring off in the first round will be the Eagles and Fireballs, and the Terps and Lakers. The questions on everybody's mind will be "Can Carl Meakes III do it a third time?" Can the Terps score 4 points in 5 seconds? And can anybody stop the Manticores three S's (Shane, Sam, Sequoia)?

The answers will be provided from March 2 to 17 in the form of a double elimination play-off tournament dubbed E.I.B. (Extreme Intramural Basketball). Come see our community's shooters and scholars at the Greenbelt Youth Center.

Program for Teens With Disabilities

Young people with disabilities are encouraged to apply for a program that promotes leadership and independence. The Maryland Youth Leadership Forum brings together high school juniors and seniors throughout Maryland who have all types of disabilities, including physical, learning and sensory disabilities.

Students who are accepted into the program will attend a four-day session at Bowie State University in July. They will learn from successful adults with disabilities, be matched with mentors, spend a day in the State Capitol and participate in activities designed to develop self-confidence and team-building.

Sponsors of the Maryland Youth Leadership Forum include the Maryland State Department of Education and the Governor's Office for Individuals with Disabilities and Independence Now. For more information and an application call: Cathy Raggio at 301-277-2839.

Two photographs that appear in this issue show early scenes of what is now the Mobil Gas Station on Crescent Road, opposite Gardenway. The gas station was built by the federal government in 1937 as part of the services provided to Greenbelt's earliest residents. The Friends of the Greenbelt Museum and the City of Greenbelt recently dedicated seven walking tour panels throughout the city which explain the significance of many of Greenbelt's historic sites like the gas station. The panels were funded by a grant from Preservation Maryland/Maryland Historical Trust to encourage heritage tourism throughout the state. The City of Greenbelt and FOGM also supported the project.

New Deal Benefit Attracts Enthusiastic Crowd

by Susan G. Parker

The grandparents admitted that they looked a little incongruous listening to an edgy young rock band blast high decibel songs on Saturday night. "Where's Guy Lombardo?" one joked. But they were there to see their grandson, who was in a band scheduled to play a little later in the evening. The fundraiser for the New Deal Café, called "Slay the Dragon," attracted an eclectic crowd, from grandparents of band members, to teenagers who had heard about a rock concert, and others who just wanted the New Deal Café to stay open.

More than 100 people came to the benefit concert held at the Community Center gym, which netted $351 after expenses. The fundraiser was the first in a series of concerts according to emcee Stan Brown. The Café has amassed considerable debt since it opened in Roosevelt Center last April and its existence has become precarious.

"You've probably read articles in the paper that the Café has been having some growing pains," Brown told the audience between sets. "But the response to the New Deal has been so fantastic that we plan to have it around for a long time to come."

Volunteers did their best to give the community gym a café atmosphere. Candles at each table provided dim lighting. Exercise mats lay on the floor for fans who wanted to be closer to the stage. Homemade cookies, sodas and coffee sold quickly.

A new mountain bike was raffled off at the end of the evening. Conflicting information about the time and price of the concert may have kept some people away, but organizers were pleased with the turnout.

Among those attending were Maria Fuentes, owner of Maria's Beauty Shop in Roosevelt Center, her husband Roddy and friends and co-workers. "We had to be here, honey, because we want the Café to stay open," Fuentes said. "I like its set-up with all the goodies there. We need something like this in Greenbelt as a gathering place, as a convenience. The location is perfect. It's nice for our senior citizens. They can have a cup of coffee and sit for hours."

Three Bands

The opening act of the night was Blackout, a young and enthusiastic rock band that has been together for five years.

With shades of Alanis Morissette, the band belted out tunes full of fury and feeling. Lead singer Rachel McMullin said she screams into a microphone instead of screaming at people who upset her.

The band was happy to play at the benefit concert, McMullin said.

"The café has been really good to me and our band," she said. "They've helped us out and given us a place to play."

Next up was Liquid Solid, described by band member Chris Helms as "dashboard-pounding rock and roll." The band members met at the Corcoran School of Art and have devoted themselves full time to their music career ever since. After their set (and after many in the crowd drifted over to the New Deal Café to hear singer Michelle Swan), the headliners, Guys in Ties, came on.

The nine-member band — all but one are students at Eleanor Roosevelt High School — had everyone up and dancing to a mixture of reggae, blues and old-fashioned rock and roll covers. The 16-song set included the crowd pleasers "I Shot the Sheriff" and "Hard to Handle." Joe Pugliese, who handled lead guitar and vocals, and Ben Kepler, who played a horn solo and sang, have written music together for six years and performed at the Greenbelt New Year's Eve celebrations.

Music from bands like Guys in Ties is what makes Paul Downs so anxious to see the Café continue. A 40-year resident of Greenbelt, Downs volunteers at the Café every Friday night, washing dishes, taking orders, cleaning tables and "clapping wildly for anyone who comes and plays."

"I would be almost devastated if the Café didn't continue to happen," Downs said. "It's been so communal. People who I've known casually for years I'm now meeting and having coffee with."
